Feds spend billions on external contracts

Increase. As feds play hard ball with public servants, spending on external contractors has been quietly and steadily growing

As the federal Conservatives cut the ranks of the public service, spending on extra professional services for departments and agencies has been steadily rising to more than $10 billion a year, a Torstar News Service analysis reveals.

Federal departments and agencies spent more than $10 billion a year for the past four years on professional services — work like management consulting, IT assistance, and engineering, purchased from external contractors or from other government entities.

That's up from the $7.8 billion spent in 2006, a 27.8 per cent increase under

Prime Minister Stephen Harper's tenure.

Over the seven-year period, the federal government has spent more than $67 billion on outside professional help. The bulk of that money — about $41 billion — has been spent over the past four fiscal years alone.

Treasury Board officials say the contracting is needed to address unexpected fluctuations in workload, or to acquire special expertise. But critics say it's an attack on the public service that the Conservatives have never fully trusted — one that will limit the public's access to information and could cost federal coffers more.

"We have no evidence that the use of external consultants actually costs the taxpayer less," said Mathieu Ravnagat, the NDP's Treasury Board critic. "I think Canadians are better served by (the public service) than a consulting company that Canadians know very little about."

Contracting out services could continue to grow as the feds work through plans to eliminate 19,200 public service jobs by 2015.

Ravnagat said the increase spells trouble for transparency. The public can request to access information from public servants, but not from a private management consulting firm.

"It's a tool that they can use, which perhaps is easier and more flexible than using the internal services of the public service," Ravnagat said. "But obviously the right for Canadians to know is important, and if they were doing this (work) with our public service we would know more about it."

Data compiled by Public Works and Government Services Canada shows three budget portfolios have consistently spent the most on professional services: National Defence, Public Works, and Public Safety.

Hwy. 105. Stoned driver was playing chicken with cars: Police

A 42-year-old Dunrobin man was arrested for impaired driving Saturday after he allegedly smoked pot and played "chicken" with at least a dozen cars, including a police cruiser on Highway 105 in Wakefield.

According to MRC des Collines Spokesperson Martin Fournel, the man, who has yet to be identified, left Mont Ste-Marie after a day of snowboarding around 4 p.m. Saturday and began "driving like he was impaired."

He was veering in and out of his lane and drivers heading in the opposite direction had to swerve to avoid a head-on collision, said Fournel. He said his force got calls from motorists following the driver.

A police cruiser headed north to intercept the driver and nearly collided with him head-on, Fournel said.

Officers figured the man was drunk, but they couldn't smell alcohol. A breathalyzer proved he was under the legal blood-alcohol concentration of .08 per cent, but officers sent the man to a Gatineau police station where cops performed an "intense questionnaire" that Fournel said revealed the driver was stoned on marijuana.

Police also took a urine sample and results are pending. They found no drugs or alcohol in the man's car.

Charges are pending against the driver, said Fournel.

Gatineau no longer an Ottawa suburb: Mayor

Breaking ground.
New retail development
the first step toward a
'city of the future'

DENIS

ottawa@metronews.ca

Christmas came early for Gatineau's retail landscape as Peter Simons of La Maison Simons and Gatineau Mayor Maxime Pedneaud-Jobin broke ground on a new $110-million reconfiguration of Les Promenades Gatineau (formerly Les Promenades de l'Outaouais) Monday.

By fall 2015, what was a dated dollar-store shopping centre on Maloney Blvd. will re-emerge as an upscale retail destination, developers promised. With 155 stores the new mall will boast some of the hottest A-list retailers, including La Maison Simons, H&M, Forever 21 and an expanded and upgraded food court, scheduled to open in late 2014.

Simons has been trying to open one of its premium boutique fashion stores in a premium retail setting in west Quebec for years, but none were available until now.

"The retail landscape is changing. We've been working to get into Gatineau, into

Bright future

"Gatineau is one of the fastest-growing cities in Quebec, and a lot of business is moving here."

Gatineau Mayor Maxime Pedneaud-Jobin

an A-list property like this," said Peter Simons, who flew in from his Montreal headquarters for the ground-breaking. "Even while we're opening a new store in Ottawa, Quebecers are more familiar with Simons."

"Gatineau is one of the fastest-growing cities in Quebec and a lot of business is moving here," boasted Gatineau Mayor Maxime Pedneaud-Jobin. "Gone are the days when we were a suburb of Ottawa. We're building an exciting city of the future."

Les Promenades Gatineau's new owners Oxford Properties purchased the site in 2011 after shopping for a similar property but finding none available in Ottawa. Oxford already owns many of the top malls in Canada, including Yorkdale and Scarborough Town Centre in Toronto.

"Gatineau is a growing, exciting urban centre and a core market for our company," said Michael Kitt, VP for Oxford's Canadian properties.

YMCA TRY. Two Ottawa women say they were shocked to discover when they were evicted from transitional housing there was no dispute resolution mechanism

ottawa@metronews.ca

Two Ottawa women who say they were unjustly evicted from social housing programs are fighting to give disabled and abused women more rights and support when it comes to transitional housing.

Sankira, who wished to keep her last name anonymous, says she was evicted from the Taggart Family YMCA TRY program — a supportive housing program for women — in mid-November after she complained that she had been threatened by other residents and that staff had entered her room without her permission.

She told Metro she was given only seven days' notice to leave the premises and when she wasn't able to get her stuff out of the building on time, staff at the centre called police on her.

Quoted

"We are not nobodies, we are not dirt, they are treating us like dirt."

Sankira, one of two Ottawa women who say they've been unjustly evicted from the Taggart Family YMCA TRY program

And with no rights under the Residential Tenancies Act (RTA) — as it doesn't apply to transitional housing or shelters — Sankira was left with nowhere to go and no one to help.

"I'm homeless," said a distraught Sankira, adding that she has been couch surfing since the eviction on Nov. 15.

She suffers from post-traumatic stress disorder from previous sexual violence and also has scoliosis and arthritis.

YMCA vice-president of housing, employment and newcomer services Cathy Turnbull wouldn't speak about Sankira's specific case due to confidentiality issues, but she did tell Metro that since the TRY program began more than two years ago, only two people have been asked to leave.

She said kicking women out of the program is a "last resort," and added that the YMCA works to help a person find alternative housing solutions.

"Any decision that is made like this is not made lightly," said Turnbull.

"It's a very difficult decision, particularly when the person we are working with is unable to work with us for their own personal reasons."

She said it's YMCA policy to give residents two weeks' notice, although the centre tries to give at least one month.

Turnbull couldn't speak to Sankira's situation, but said all complaints are considered serious and are always looked into, especially when physical threats are involved.

"A person is not asked to leave because they complained," she said. "We would have had to ask the entire residence to leave if that were the case, because everyone, at some time, will have some complaint about something."

The YMCA on Argyle Street in Ottawa is not only a sports-and-recreation centre; it also offers transitional housing for people who need affordable accommodations. The service helps adults who are students, newcomers to Canada, people in transition due to separation and divorce, people with unsafe or unstable housing, and individuals coping with issues related to physical/mental illness, or substance abuse. Resident-tenant act

Those not protected

According to Ontario Ministry of Municipal Affairs and Housing spokesperson May Nazar, the resident-tenant act only applies to residents living in permanent social housing units.

Those in transitional housing or shelters have no access to a landlord-tenant tribunal and can therefore be tossed out of a shelter on a whim.

That's what a woman named Glory said also happened to her. Glory, who also withheld her last name, said she was kicked out of the Cornerstone Women's Shelter last year after a dispute with another resident.

She said she was attacked and defended herself, but was kicked out the same night after the resident complained.

"They didn't even ask me my side of the story," said Glory. "They kicked me out the same day. It was pouring outside."

Officials with Cornerstone could not be reached for comment.

She said she used to be a teacher for special needs students, but Glory said she suffered an aneurism in 2001 and was unable to continue teaching. Although she has a degree in mediation and foreign affairs, Glory said she has been looking for a job for eight months and has been bouncing from place to place.

She just found an apartment, but fears other women are in jeopardy.

Both Sankira and Glory said they want other residents of shelters and transition homes to be protected under the RTA, like regular citizens are.

"Everyone with a disability deserves to be treated like a person, with dignity and not thrown out on the street," Sankira said, breaking into tears. "This is not OK. It's not OK." METRO

Ottawa-Carleton Detention Centre

Prof. aims to improve OCDC conditions

A Carleton University professor who has been studying problems associated with overcrowding at the Ottawa-Carleton Detention Centre is planning to put pressure on the provincial government to take measures to improve conditions at the jail.

Criminology and sociology professor Aaron Doyle hosted close to 300 people last Thursday at a public forum at Carleton in conjunction with the Criminalization and Punishment Education Project. The group is a collaboration between Carleton and the University of Ottawa.

Former inmates of the Innes Road jail spoke at the event, describing how they would often share a cell with two beds with two or more inmates inside.

"I think the more you put a human face on it and the more you hear people's different sad stories, that's what really reaches the public," said Doyle.

He said he's organizing a new meeting for Dec. 7 at the Bronson Centre at 2 p.m. in order to compile a list of goals to correct chronic problems such as overcrowding, lack of cleanliness, appropriate dental care, and inadequate distribution of food. "We're going to work out how to apply political pressure to get those goals," said Doyle, adding that a list of those goals will be sent to Madeleine Meilleur, Minister of Community Safety and Correctional Services.

Ottawa lawyer Lawrence Greenspon said on Monday his firm gets on average one complaint every week from an inmate about being mistreated at the OCDC. "We don't get calls from inmates complaining about overcrowding because overcrowding has become the norm," he said. "It's not going to get any better because the more you have these mandatory minimum sentences, the more you're going to have automatic incarceration as a result."

Ottawa film packs a lot into 8 minutes

Wired. Local filmmakers' comedic, hyper-violent short lands top honours at Digi60 festival

ottawa@metronews.ca

Ottawa filmmakers Brendan McNeill and Nick Hillier's challenge was to make a movie in eight minutes or less.

What they came up with was an action comedy called Wired that won two prizes at the 2013 Digi60 Digital Filmmaker's Festival on Saturday.

You can see an embedded version on metronews.ca, on Vimeo and, eventually, on the Digi60 homepage, digi60.org.

Produced on a shoestring budget in eight weeks on location at the City Centre building and in Kinburn, Wired is a hyper-violent comedy about an undercover cop who infiltrates the mob. In a scant seven minutes and 30 seconds, it covers as much story as most action films do in 90 minutes, with plenty left over for car chases and guns galore.

"Imagine Bad Boys with Will Ferrell," said Hillier, 31, who co-wrote, co-directed and stars in the film, and who co-owns the True Bearing Pictures film company with producer McNeill. "We wanted the viewer to not know what to expect next. Keep them guessing. We packed a lot into eight minutes."

Wired beat out eight other locally produced shorts to win overall best film by an experienced filmmaker, and best technical film at the capital region's annual digital film festival. Its cinematography and editing are as impressive as its choreographed action sequences and snappy dialogue.

Hillier and McNeill partnered with three of Ottawa's most respected filmmakers: producer Richard Towns, director Nick Lacelle and cinematographer Adrian Langley, who gave Wired a clean and thoroughly stylish look.

The results speak for themselves.

"We'd love to be putting things forward for theatrical release, movies good enough for people to pay to see," says Hillier. "But for now, making movies for online is a good building experience."

Activism. Canadians join global group to help restore democracy in Egypt

An Egyptian-Canadian human-rights group said it has joined a new coalition of activists from around the world to help bring democracy back to the African nation and oppose the current military-backed regime since the controversial ousting of President Mohamed Morsi.

Ehab Lotayef, a member of the grassroots, pan-Canadian group Egyptian-Canadian Coalition for Democracy (ECCD), made the announcement on Parliament Hill Monday. The new network they co-founded is called Egyptians Worldwide for Democracy and Justice (EW4DJ) and will be announced in other cities globally in the coming days.

Backed by a network of activists from around the world and the openness of the Internet, Lotayef said EW4DJ will "expose the lies of the current Egyptian regime," which he says has been "whitewashing" the July 3 military coup.

The coup that removed Morsi from power has divided many Egyptians who have taken to Cairo's Tahrir Square in recent months to protest his ousting. Morsi was Egypt's first democratically-elected president since the fall of former president Hosni Mubarak, who held onto power for more than 40 years.

Halifax. MLA says he now realizes traditional Dutch Christmas character 'Black Pete' may be inappropriate

HALEY RYAN
Metro in Halifax

The Liberal MLA for Halifax-Chebucto fought back tears Monday as he spoke with media about a photo of himself sitting on the lap of a blackface Christmas character he had posted to Twitter and later removed due to the backlash.

Joachim Stroink tweeted the image of himself and his wife at a Dutch Christmas event with Zwarte Piet, or "Black Pete," on Sunday evening.

"This is a Dutch tradition I grew up with and never, ever in my deepest heart, ever thought that this would be portrayed in this manner," Stroink said. "There was no malicious intent whatsoever."

The debate around Pete intensified this year after cultural experts with the United Nations began examining whether the tradition is racist. People in the Netherlands are also divided, with some protesting the character and others declaring Zwarte Piet a symbol of Christmas fun.

Stroink said the negative attention he was getting on Monday "hurts in many ways," because he has had to realize parts of his own culture might be at odds with the African Nova Scotian citizens he represents as a politician.

"I have to be respectful that I represent every culture, and no longer Joachim Stroink."

Stroink said he realizes there is "no place" for blackface in Nova Scotia culture, and met with Tony Ince, a black member of the legislature and the minister of African Nova Scotian affairs, to discuss updating the tradition.

He said it could be that Zwarte Piet is no longer appropriate, but that's something the Dutch community should decide on their own, with "hopefully" Stroink and Ince's help.

Questioning tradition

'Black Pete' sparks debate

The Dutch character is the servant of St. Nicholas or "Sinterklaas" according to a traditional song, and is often shown wearing blackface makeup, red lipstick and a frizzy "Afro" wig.

"It may be part of a tradition but that doesn't mean that it's right," said Christopher Helland, a sociology of religion professor at Dalhousie University.

The photo may not have been such an issue without social media, Helland said, but added online debates are good because they allow people who aren't usually heard to express their concerns. METRO

Opposition leader wishes 'infidel atheists' a happy holiday

Manitoba's Opposition leader's holiday wishes to groups including "infidel atheists" has left online commentators divided as to whether the phrase was insulting or an awkward attempt at humour.

Brian Pallister gave a holiday message last week to a citizen journalist with a video camera. In the recording, which has thousands of views on YouTube, Pallister offers seasonal greetings to Christians, Jews and others.

"All you infidel atheists out there, I want to wish you the very best also," the Progressive Conservative leader says on the video.

"I don't know what you celebrate during the holiday season. I myself celebrate the birth of Christ, but it's your choice, and I respect your choice. If you wish to celebrate nothing and just get together with friends, that's good, too."

Pallister didn't directly apologize Monday. He asked for forgiveness while at the same time defending his use of the word infidel.

Read all about it. Brazeau lands himself new gig as Parliament Hill reporter

Suspended senator Patrick Brazeau has found work as a freelance reporter for the Halifax edition of Frank Magazine, despite having no prior journalism experience and a track record of Twitter trouble. There's also the matter of his impending trial over charges of assault and sexual assault.

Brazeau openly solicited work on Twitter after he and fellow senators Mike Duffy and Pamela Wallin were suspended in early November over their questionable expense claims.

The satire and gossip magazine — not to be confused with the entirely distinct Ottawa version of the same name — announced its newest hire Monday.

Brazeau dropped off his application for accreditation to the parliamentary press gallery in person Monday afternoon. It will now fall to the press gallery's board of directors to decide whether or not to accredit Brazeau. If it does, he will be granted a pass that allows him to roam freely through some of the corridors of the parliamentary precinct.

Rafferty seeks public money to fund appeal

Tori Stafford murder.

Michael Rafferty can't afford legal help but needs it to appeal complex murder case, his lawyer argues

The jury that convicted Michael Rafferty of killing eight-year-old Victoria Stafford should have considered that he might have been only an accessory after the fact to her brutal murder, Ontario's Appeal Court was told Monday.

The argument was part of lawyer Paul Calarco's attempt to convince the court that there is merit to an appeal of Rafferty's convictions for first-degree murder, sexual assault causing bodily harm and kidnapping.

Rafferty wants the Appeal Court to order that the public fund his appeal, which Calarco argues is too complex for Rafferty to handle by himself. Rafferty can't afford to hire a lawyer and has been turned down four times by Legal Aid since his convictions in May 2012.

Rafferty's trial heard that he and his former girlfriend, Terri-Lynne McClintic, lured Tori from her school in Woodstock, Ont., and drove to a secluded field, where the Grade 3 student was sexually assaulted and brutally beaten to death in April 2009.

It's "absolutely vital" that every person have the right to a fair trial and a proper ap-

Grounds for appeal?

The trial judge made three errors, lawyer Paul Calarco told the court.

- McClintic made conflicting statements about whether she or Rafferty delivered the fatal blows to Tori. If she was the "principal offender," then Rafferty's actions would make him an accessory after the fact.
- Superior Court Judge Thomas Heeney erred by not giving the jury a Vetrovec warning, which cautions juries about the testimony of untrustworthy witnesses.

- The third ground that Calarco said points to the merit of Rafferty's appeal is another issue regarding McClintic's conflicting evidence. "This is a person who is totally capable of deceit," Calarco said.
- Crown attorney Randy Schwartz opposed the motion, arguing that the appeal is not particularly complex and doesn't raise novel points of law.

peal, Calarco said.

"That applies no matter if the person is one for whom the public has sympathy ... or a person the public has no sympathy for," he said.

Appeal Court Justice Marc Rosenberg reserved his decision, but he can either dismiss Rafferty's motion, request that Legal Aid fund a lawyer or order that the money should come from the Attorney General.

Rafferty had been serving his life sentence at Kingston Penitentiary, but after the prison closed this year, he was moved to an institution in Quebec. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Suicide video seen online

An Ontario university has confirmed a fire was deliberately set in one of its dorms and is urging the public to avoid a suicide video of the event posted online.

It is believed a man who attempted suicide by taking sleeping pills and lighting his dorm room on fire — and streamed video of the event online — is a 20-year-old student at the University of Guelph.

On Saturday, a man identified only as "Stephen" posted a message on 4chan's /b/ board, one of the Internet's most diverse communities.

"Tonight I will be ending my own life. I've been spending the last hour making the preparations and I'm ready to go through with it. As an oldfag who's been on 4chan since 2004, I thought I would finally give back to the community in the best way possible: I am willing to an hero on cam for you all," wrote Stephen.

In 4chan parlance, "an hero" is slang for committing suicide.

A video stream was set up and users watched as Stephen swallowed some unidentified pills and chased them with vodka. He then proceeded to start a fire in his room and curl up in bed.

Stephen continued to post to the stream's live chat, typing messages like "#imdead" and "#omgimonthefire."

Eventually, firefighters stormed in and rescued the young man.

It now appears that Stephen is a student at the University of Guelph. Firefighters were on campus Saturday night and took one victim to hospital with serious burns.

The fire call came in approximately 90 minutes after Stephen's first post on 4chan.

The university has since confirmed that the fire was deliberately set by a 20-year-old student in Dundas Hall.

"The university is aware that there is disturbing social media activity circulating about this incident and is urging people not to watch or distribute this hurtful material," read a statement.

According to the Daily Dot, 4chan users are already celebrating Stephen, referring to him as "Toaster Steve."

N.Y. derailment. Train was travelling 52 m.p.h. over the speed limit

A commuter train that derailed over the weekend, killing four passengers, was hurtling at 82 m.p.h. as it entered a 30 m.p.h. curve, a federal investigator said Monday. But whether the wreck was the result of human error or brake trouble was still unclear, he said.

Asked why the train was going so fast, National Transportation Safety Board member Earl Weener said, "That's the question we need to answer."

Weener said the information on the locomotive's speed was preliminary and extracted from the Metro-North train's two data recorders, taken from the wreckage after the Sunday morning accident in the Bronx. He also said investigators had begun interviewing the crew members, but he would not disclose what the engineer had told them.

He said investigators were also examining the engineer's cellphone — apparently to determine whether he was operating the train while distracted.

Asked whether the tragedy was because of error or bad brakes, Weener said, "The answer is, at this point in time, we can't tell." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BLACK FRIDAY LEAVES A BLACK MARK

For five days straight my email inbox has received an uninterrupted deluge of sale announcements and promotional messages touting can't-miss markdowns on everything from leather jackets to hotel rooms to sushi platters.

From Black Friday Eve (previously known as American Thanksgiving) through to Cyber Monday, my cellphone has served as an annoying reminder of our collective obsession with discounted consumer goods and my own inability to remove myself from email lists.

You'd think Canadians would have been spared from this fabricated "holiday." But even though our Thanksgiving came and went over a month ago, Canadian retailers just had to get their own slice of that profitable retail pie. Wait—I should probably avoid "pie" references as they might conjure up images of families spending time together, when in fact 'tis the season for saving 40 per cent off flat-screen TVs.

I get it, stuff is expensive, and when that same stuff becomes not so expensive for a limited time, it's tempting to try and cash in on those savings. But the whole Black Friday thing has gotten out of control.

How does a simple holiday sale transform an average group of people into a stampeding herd who will stop at nothing to validate their self-worth through the accumulation of designer clothing and brand-name electronics?

In 2008, a 34-year-old Walmart employee died in Long Island after being trampled to death by hordes of impatient shoppers waiting to enter the store.

One of the worst things about this heinous event is that the bargain hunters—upon hearing the news of the man's death—just kept shopping. The same thing happened again in 2011 when shoppers walked over a 61-year-old man's collapsed body at a Target store in West Virginia.

According to blackfridaydeathcount.com—a morbid website that tallies the number of deaths and injuries related to Black Friday shopping events—there have been seven deaths and 90 injuries recorded since 2006. It's sickening to think that we've come to accept tragedies as just another part of this annual ritualistic display of mass consumption.

Why do we continue to support a tradition that puts a price on a human life, especially when that dollar amount is a mere $35 off a Blu-ray player?

Sorry to get a bit sentimental, but what I really want for Christmas this year doesn't have a price tag on it. I want us all to start acting less greedy and much more humane. I want to live in a world where, if people see a man fall, they help him get back up rather than brutally crushing him to death as they lunge at 2-for-1 Lego box sets.

Watching clips of savage shoppers mauling one another in the electronics aisle, I find myself wishing that this time of year could look more like the feel-good opening montage from Love Actually rather than a climactic scene from The Hunger Games.

Krampus's pagan roots

- The European practice of donning beast-like costumes and performing folk plays can be traced back thousands of years to pagan times. Among the most common figures in these rituals were Old Man Winter and the horned Goat-Man—archetypes now found in the forms of St. Nicholas/Santa Claus, and the devil, a.k.a. Krampus.
- Since the 1800s, Krampus has been emblazoned on festive greeting cards, often with the message "Grüß Vom Krampus" ("Greetings from Krampus"). In this way, the Krampus acquired a campy, Santa-ized quality. In 2004, comics publisher Monte Beauchamp reintroduced Krampus cards to America nearly a century after their heyday.

The Hangover Trilogies

Director. Todd Phillips

Stars. Zach Galifianakis, Bradley Cooper, Ed Helms

Any definition of the law of diminishing returns should in future simply have an arrow pointing to the cover of this triple set. The Hangover arrived in 2009 as a hilarious original comedy/mystery directed by Todd Phillips and starring Bradley Cooper, Zach Galifianakis, Ed Helms and Justin Bartha. The high-concept story had the four actors as bachelor party attendees on a Vegas bender. Three of them awaken from a night of drunken frolics to discover the fourth guy, the groom, MIA and possibly in danger. Wacky clues and bizarre antics enliven their search, which did boffo box office biz. A sequel was a given, but few could have predicted the rinse-and-repeat rip that was The Hangover Part II in 2011, which essentially replayed the story in a more exotic locale, Bangkok. Expectations were low for The Hangover Part III this past summer, and those expectations were met. Phillips thankfully ditched the drunk-and-hunt plot, replacing it with a crime angle (John Goodman plays an angry gangster). But he also dumped most of the laughs. The first film remains good enough to almost forgive the two weak sequels.

The Sound of Music Live! Time is ticking for the cast of NBC's live production — a feat not attempted in more than 50 years

Maria, former would-be nun, is about to get married.

Starring as Maria in NBC's new version of The Sound of Music, Carrie Underwood is clad in her own T-shirt and leggings plus a wedding veil as she reverently steps through the bare-bones Manhattan rehearsal space while three dozen castmates, on their feet as if in church, sing How do you solve a problem like Maria?

Underwood's procession ends at the "altar" (marked by a music stand) to join her groom, Capt. von Trapp, played by jeans-and-sweater-sporting Stephen Moyer.

During this preliminary run-through a few weeks ago, much work clearly remained to get The Sound of Music Live! ready for airtime on Thursday, when it, along with everyone involved, will make history: More than a half-century has passed since a broadcast network has dared to mount a full-scale musical for live TV.

It would have been risky enough revisiting this Rodgers and Hammerstein classic on any terms. But this is no remake of the not-to-be-tampered-with Julie Andrews juggernaut, declares Neil Meron. Meron and longtime partner Craig Zadan are the telecast's Oscar-winning executive producers.

Instead, The Sound of Music Live! is the 1959 Broadway musical reimagined for TV, then given extra crackle with a live presentation.

Meron's message: Everybody knows The Sound of Music, or thinks they do from the 1965 film nearly everyone has seen. But relatively few fans are acquainted with the stage original. Drawing from it, The Sound of Music Live! is meant to feel familiar, yet at the same time come across as new and different.

Consider: Moyer with castmates Laura Benanti (as Baroness Elsa Schrader) and Christian Borle (as Max Detweiler) are rehearsing a couple of weeks later a saucy song titled How Can Love Survive? This song will be brand-new to most viewers of the telecast — it was dropped from the movie.

"Plenty of nothing you haven't got. How can love survive?" Max tunelessly teases the wealthy Elsa, who, in her posh relationship with her fiancé, Capt. von Trapp, can never count theirs among "all the famous love affairs (where) lovers starve and snuggle."

This number, sung to an instrumental track recorded by a 40-piece orchestra, takes place on the sumptuous von Trapp terrace, complete with a fountain and a panoramic view of the Alps.

There are still no costumes — at the moment, Borle is wearing jeans and a Batman T-shirt — but by now the entire production has redeployed to a cavernous Long Island, N.Y., soundstage.

Grumman Studios' Stage 3, with square footage rivaling a football field's, is now home to the terrace, along with five neighbouring sets evoking pre-Second World War Austria including the abbey, a festival site draped with huge swastikas and the summit over which (spoiler alert) Maria, the Captain and his seven children pass to flee the Nazis at the musical's conclusion.

This will mark Carrie Underwood's first time in a major acting role. Despite her status as a multiplatinum country music superstar who rose to fame as the winner of American Idol in 2005, she is a rookie compared to the other stage veterans.

"Carrie is one of the bravest artists we've ever worked with," says Meron, who notes that she arrived two weeks before the production's six-week rehearsal began with her lines fully memorized, to get a head start.

"Every day," she says during a break, "I feel like I discover new things and how to go places in acting that I didn't think I could go."

Don't call it time travel: How a T.O. video store clerk pitched Sleepy Hollow to Hollywood

Tom Mison plays Ichabod Crane in Sleepy Hollow. BROWNIE HARRIS/FOX

Selling a series. By the time Philip Iscove met with a couple of veteran showrunners, he knew what not to say to them

Television has always been a bit of a time machine. It allows viewers to look back, as in the recent coverage of the JFK assassination, and it also projects us into the future.

As a plot device, time travel is every TV writer's friend. It gets shows out of dead ends and jams, as in the infamous Bobby-in-the-shower reset on Dallas. The many incarnations of Star Trek boldly jumped all over the centuries.

In the wake of the assassination of U.S. president John F. Kennedy, ABC's The Time Tunnel (1966-67) allowed viewers to escape or even imagine what might have happened if we could go back in time and try to fix history. A similar plot device helped the central character jump back and forth in time in Quantum Leap (1989-93). That series was very much on Phillip Iscove's mind when he began dreaming up the idea that would lead to one of this season's most successful new shows, Sleepy Hollow.

How the 31-year-old went from working at a Toronto video store to creating Sleepy Hollow (Mondays on Global) is its own quantum leap.

Iscove was studying film and television day and night as both a Ryerson University student and a part-time employee at Bay Street Video in Toronto.

A more bracing experience was landing a job, through a family connection, at a Hollywood talent agency. "That was my graduate degree, if you will," Iscove says on the phone from North Carolina, where Sleepy Hollow is shot. "It really changed the way I saw television and movies."

He entered Ryerson, "with these altruistic notions of how

Renewal notice

- Sleepy Hollow was the first series renewed for a second season this fall.

you're going to get yourself into that industry, and what you'll do when you get there." The agency job showed him how things really worked "from the inside out. The business experience, he feels, gave Iscove "the tools to understand why things succeed and why they don't."

Iscove took all that experience and started dreaming up his own TV project. But he was stuck on how to travel his main hero through time when he happened upon The Legend of Sleepy Hollow by Washington Irving online. "Then I saw Rip Van Winkle right underneath it and I was, like, maybe I can just put him to sleep and have it as simple as that, have a spell put on him in his time and he wakes up in 2013."

That led to a story about, as Iscove puts it, "a Twin Peaks-y town of witches and warlocks, and he pairs with a cop, and they start fighting supernatural crimes together." The hero is Irving's Ichabod Crane (played by Tom Mison), pulled through time only to discover he is humanity's last hope.

When Iscove got his chance to pitch the series idea to veteran showrunners Alex Kurtzman and Roberto Orci (Fringe, Star Trek: Into Darkness), he knew enough from his agency days to avoid using the term time travel. The pitch was mainly to do a modern-day Sleepy Hollow, with the twist being, in Orci's words, "that he had a man out of time."

That Iscove had managed to sidestep the time travel aspect by combining the story of Sleepy Hollow with the spirit Rip Van Winkle — both Irving creations — is what sealed the deal for Kurtzman and Orci. "That's a really, really cool entry point," says Kurtzman.

The Chew savours the sweet taste of success

When ABC's The Chew premiered in September 2011, it begged the question: Was it biting off more than a show like this could chew?

Here was a rollicking weekday feast devoted to "everything food" — not just cooking but home entertaining, dining out, healthy diets and a satisfying culinary lifestyle overall. And it came with a menu of five — count 'em, five — co-hosts. Too many cooks in that kitchen?

Well, maybe not. On Tuesday in its regular 1 p.m. time slot, The Chew marks its 500th edition with a special hour as its co-hosts savour their chat-and-chew success.

"The Chew was never about food, it was about these five people," says executive producer Gordon Elliott before a recent taping at the show's Manhattan studio.

Roughly 59 minutes later (to keep the energy flowing, each show is taped in front of a studio audience start-to-finish, with no retakes or down time slowing the pace), the hosts — Mario Batali, Michael Symon, Carla Hall,

"What makes the show work," says Symon (a star of Food Network's Iron Chef America and owner of six restaurants), "is that it literally feels like all of us are hanging out, cooking some food and telling stories. We're busting each other's chops, but we all know we've got each other's back."

"And by now, it happens naturally," adds Batali (the co-owner of 17 restaurants nationally as well as a Food Network star and bestselling author). "We all know when it's each person's turn to talk, and we know we'll all get our turn."

"We always tell each other before the show starts, 'Party in the kitchen,'" says Kelly (who was also a host of TLC's recently concluded What Not to Wear). "That's what we want: for people to come into our kitchen and have a good time."

What cha' know about the not-so-new tea trend matcha?

Good for you. It's been called the Superman of green tea, but what exactly does it do to help you in your day-to-day life?

MAJA LUNDAGER PEDERSEN
Metro World News

One hundred thirty times — that's how much the super-trendy, super-old Japanese matcha tea is supposed to beat regular green tea with when it comes to antioxidants. But what does that really mean? And is there a purpose for including a teaspoon of the — some would say not exactly tasty — matcha powder?

"I definitely think matcha can help prevent (illnesses) and keep you healthy when it comes to diseases," says Rachel Berman, dietitian and health content manager for About.com.

Matcha is a green tea and research shows that the antioxidants (more precisely, catechins) in it reduce the risk of cancer. Furthermore, green tea contains serotonin, which can help reduce stress and work as a mood enhancer. Last but certainly not least, it can help increase metabolism. But Berman is hesitant to tout it as a cure-all.

"I wouldn't necessarily say, 'Drink green tea and you will lose weight,'" she says. "The amount of calories you may burn won't make up for having a cheeseburger at lunch."

Making sense of matcha

If you find this wonder tea a tiny bit too expensive, Berman recommends you instead ask for a really high quality of green tea. You will probably get a lot of the same benefits from it, she says.

• Where is it grown? Matcha only grows in Japan.

- Why drink it? It's known as a mood enhancer because of its amino acid content.
- Pricey? The softer matcha is, the more expensive it is.

One of the reasons why matcha is making waves more than normal green tea is the way it's brewed.

"Matcha is a powder and it's the entire leaf, versus brewing leaves in water, which won't give you as much of the health benefits," the dietitian tells us.

Matcha contains caffeine, too, and Berman doesn't recommend going over four or five cups a day, or drinking it past 5 p.m.

"Just incorporate it as a substitute for a mid-afternoon soda or coffee," she says.

The conclusion must be that matcha is worth a try, but one question still remains. Why has a tea that's been around since the 12th century become so popular now?

"I think that people are looking for ways to improve their diet any way possible," Berman says. "Certain foods go in and out of trend all the time, so maybe people are looking for a way to get antioxidants since there has been so much research about how good green tea is. Why not have the one that is even more powerful than just regular green tea?"

Add a little matcha to your afternoon delight. ALL PHOTOS ISTOCK IMAGES

Want to watch your weight? Keep your home very toasty

Body science. New research flips common thinking on its head as they find a healthy body weight is linked to those who live in warmer homes

MEREDITH ENGEL
Metro World News

The secret to keeping your figure during the holidays may have nothing to do with your dinner plate.

Researchers at the University of Stirling Behavioural Science Centre in Scotland have found that people living in well-heated homes have lower BMIs (body mass indices) levels than those in the Northern Hemisphere without adequate heating.

The scientists studied

10,000 people with central heating over a 13-year period.

Their research, they say — which included age, gender, social class and other factors — turns a popular notion on its head.

"We set out to investigate the scientific claims that cooler indoor temperatures help us maintain a healthy weight by pushing our bodies to expend more energy through shivering and generating heat through tissues," says behavioral scientist and senior lecturer Dr. Michael Daly.

"In fact, the research suggests people may eat less and burn more energy when residing in a warmer indoor environment."

So what's the magic number for your thermostat?

"We ... found reduced weight levels among people living in homes heated to above 73.4 degrees Fahrenheit (23 Celsius)," Dr. Daly says of the research.

Crank up that temperature and crank up the weight loss. ISTOCK PHOTOS

Food dangers. Sushi linked to increased risk of cardiovascular issues

Eating sushi can increase the risk of cardiovascular disease, according to a study published in the Journal of Risk Research.

This was one of many unhealthy aspects to excessive fish consumption, which is thought to lead to dangerous methylmercury exposure in humans, researchers say.

Mercury can cause neurodevelopmental deficits, poorer cognitive function and increased rates of cardiovascular disease.

The study also notes that higher levels of methylmercury can be detrimental to the heart and the health-protective effects of omega-3 fatty acids found in fish.

Tuna sashimi was found to contain the highest levels of methylmercury in fish samples taken from across the U.S.

The study found that 92 per cent of participants ate an average of five fish and fish-sushi meals per month, and that the top 10 per cent of all participants exceeded the Center for Disease Control Minimal Risk Level and the World Health Organization Provisional Tolerable Weekly Intake of methylmercury. METRO

Huevos Rancheros: Brunch in Mexico without leaving home

This recipe serves two. COURTESY PRESIDENT'S CHOICE

Huevos Rancheros is a popular Mexican breakfast or brunch dish consisting of eggs.

Using egg whites instead of whole eggs in traditional egg dishes such as Huevos Rancheros saves you cholesterol, fat and calories. They also cook up fluffier than whole scrambled eggs.

1. In medium nonstick frying pan, melt butter over medium heat; cook onion for 4 to 6 minutes or until softened. In large bowl, whisk egg whites until very frothy; whisk in salt and pepper and add to pan with onions. Cook for 2 to 4 minutes, occasionally lifting eggs and allowing uncooked egg white to flow underneath, or until egg is set on bottom.

2. Meanwhile, in small saucepan cook salsa, tomatoes and beans over medium heat until hot.

3. Sprinkle cheese over eggs and turn egg whites over, scrambling them slightly. Divide cooked egg whites between two dinner plates. Top with salsa mixture. Sprinkle with coriander. Serve with warmed whole wheat tortillas, if desired.

COURTESY PRESIDENT'S CHOICE

Ingredients

- 1 tbsp (15 ml) unsalted butter
- 1/2 cup (125 ml) chopped red onion
- 1 cup (250 ml) PC Blue Menu Egg Whites
- 1/8 tsp (0.5 ml) each salt and freshly ground black pepper
- 2/3 cup (150 ml) PC Avocado and Key Lime Salsa
- 1/2 cup (125 ml) quartered cherry tomatoes
- 1/3 cup (75 ml) rinsed and drained canned black beans
- 1/3 cup (75 ml) light cheddar shredded cheese
- 2 tbsp (25 ml) chopped fresh coriander

Sunflower butter is not made from a nut. It is a seed, which makes it school approved. (Sometimes. You better check!)

Sunflower seeds are mildly anti-inflammatory due to their high mineral and antioxidant content but without sugar, the spread can be a tiny bit more bitter than the more typical peanut butter.

Fear not, here are some ways to enjoy it:

• Spread with honey and banana to provide a balanced snack.

• Dip dried fruit into a tablespoonful.

• Use in place of peanut butter in cookie recipes. You will not notice the difference.

• Add to smoothies to bump up protein and good fats.

• Use in place of tahini for making hummus.

Each time you add a different food, you are adding different nutrients, and your body needs a wide range of every kind.

Go beyond wheat crackers and try quinoa or brown rice crackers to balance out the amino acids. Pairing a nut or seed with a whole grain makes a complete protein. Be brave!

OMG: The truth about boredom

When dozing off in a classroom or office, you may think it's your fault but you would be wrong. There are clear categories of boredom triggered by your environment, says German pioneering researcher Dr. Thomas Goetz.

Indifferent boredom: A relaxing, possibly positive type – “a general indifference to, and withdrawal from, the external world”

Calibrating boredom: Wandering thoughts – “general openness to changing the situation”

Searching boredom: “Seeking out specific ways of minimizing boredom”

Apathetic boredom: Impossible to break from this mode – “dangerous, similar to depression”

Managing meltdowns: Tips on tackling your kids' Xmas tantrums

Match expectations. If you mean business with them at home, don't change a thing when you all go to the mall together

With the arrival of the holiday season comes the inevitable spike in shopping excursions and social gatherings — and with them, potential opportunities for children to act out.

Navigating through crowded aisles and packed parking lots can be stressful enough. But contending with a youngster having a meltdown in the mall is enough to fray the nerves of even the most mild-mannered parent.

“Tantrums are about power struggles and attention,” said Natalia McPhedran, an Ottawa-based children's coach and author of Life With Kids — Empowering Our Children To Be Ready For The Real World, due out in December. “If we use techniques at home that avoid the power struggles, I think that you're halfway there by the time you get to the mall because they know: ‘OK, Mom means business.’”

McPhedran — a mother of two — outlines expectations prior to a shopping trip. That includes specifying the purpose of the visit to ensure youngsters don't get sidetracked.

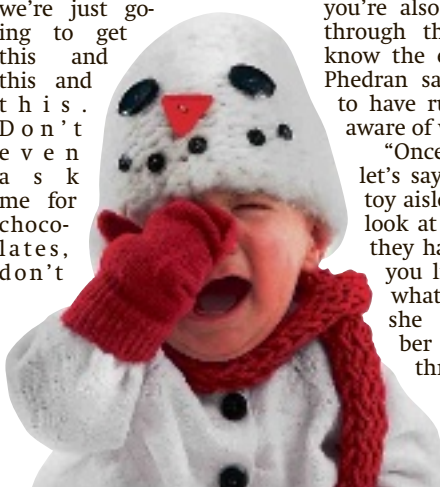

“For example: ‘Today, we're just going to get this and this and this and this. Don't even ask me for chocolates, don't ask me for candy, don't ask me for toys. You can look, but you can't touch, because today we're not buying that,’” said McPhedran. “If you're consistent with following through with other things at home, they know that you mean business when you say something.”

“You've already given them that pre-set expectation at home. When they get to the mall, they know that you're also going to follow through there.” Once kids know the expectations, McPhedran said it's still good to have rules making kids aware of what they can do.

“Once you get there, let's say: ‘Let's go in the toy aisle and let's go and look at all the cool stuff they have. Tell me what you like and we'll see what Santa can do,’” she said. “I remember we used to walk through the toy

Even if they freak out, you should remain calm at all times. ISTOCK

Festive distractions

• Keep 'em busy. “Christmas is a great way to get them involved — decorating, cleaning, vacuuming. If you're going to have a big dinner, say: ‘This is going to be your job.’ How awesome do kids feel when you give them a task, like just making the name tags for the place settings?”

section of Zellers when I was little and we never walked out with stuff every time we went.”

In the event a tearful tantrum still ensues, McPhedran said the source of unhappiness is usually due to one of three things: hunger, fatigue or a desire to be heard. Rather than reacting in anger to the outburst, she suggested an alternative approach.

“You have to keep your calm as well. Because if you freak out also, then that just gives them even more attention and more people look,” said McPhedran, mother to an 11-year-old daughter and nine-year-old son. “Come down to their level, calmly say: ‘We are not having this right now.’”

McPhedran said adults should recognize their child's feelings, such as those of anger at parents for not purchasing a particular item. But they should then remind kids of initial pre-warning that buying goods for them wasn't a part of the day's agenda.

Similarly, when it comes to attending a party or family gathering, establishing and articulating ground rules beforehand is pivotal.

“If they know what to expect and they know what you expect of them, then the behaviour should just follow,” said McPhedran.

“Before I leave the house, I would say: ‘Listen, make your aunts and uncles proud. Show them that you know how to behave when you go to (an event) like this. And make yourself proud and feel good about yourself.’”

During those sleepless pat pat, jig jig, feed, change and rock-for-hours nights, she started organizing the fridge. There she discovered a cornucopia of meals. Veggies, fruit, leftovers and bits of this and that stored in the fridge or freezer started her thinking about using it all up before the green fuzzies or freezer burn attacked.

What started out as something to kill time when she couldn't sleep turned into a habit of fridge and freezer cruising. Once she got the hang of coming up with meals based on items she had on hand, the habit quickly became ingrained.

As a result, she finds it far easier to put together dinner, no matter how tired she is, and she's discovered all kinds of new ways to use a cup of rice or a few slices of ham.

In fact, in the nearly two months since baby George arrived they haven't resorted to takeout once. Even better, neither she nor her husband feels deprived. Far from it. They feel empowered, as in, "I am in control of my fridge!"

Police launch investigation into parking lot death

Officers searched a suburban Kansas City home Monday as part of an investigation into the death of a man following a parking lot scuffle during the Sunday's game between the Chiefs and Denver Broncos.

Police spokesman Darin Snapp said detectives learned that evidence related to the man's death could be found at the Independence home. Authorities hadn't released the man's name but described him as in his 20s.

No arrests had been made, but police detained three people for questioning who were expected to be released Monday afternoon, Snapp said. He said they weren't considered suspects in the man's death. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NHL. Former captain says struggling team may just need spark to gain confidence and turn things around

Paul MacLean didn't get caught up in the nostalgia of Daniel Alfredsson day.

It didn't matter much to the Senators coach that his former captain was back in town Sunday with the Detroit Red Wings. His takeaway was his team's execution problems in a 4-2 loss, Ottawa's 17th in 27 games.

"For me it was another game that we had to play and had to win, and we didn't do enough to win," MacLean said.

That has become an all-too-familiar situation for the Senators in the post-Alfredsson era. Last spring MacLean was accepting the Jack Adams Award as coach of the year for shepherding the injury-ravaged team into the playoffs, and now he's left to wonder why his team is seven points out of a potential playoff spot with more than a quarter of the season gone.

MacLean saw Sunday as an improvement from recent play, but moral victories don't amount to a hill of beans in this crazy Eastern Conference.

"You are what you are," he said. "We need wins. You end up being what you are."

Alfredsson didn't see this group as a lost cause.

"I see them as a very competitive team," Alfredsson said after his two-point game. "I thought they played extremely hard. If anything, they're maybe in a mode where they just need a couple of wins to get some confidence. I think they're doing a lot of good things, and I expect them to do well." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Small roster a 'huge advantage': Sutter

World junior tournament. Team Canada's coach happy to have just 25 players listed for selection camp

The biggest challenge in coaching any national hockey team, says Brent Sutter, is forming an identity quickly.

"What you're about as a team, how you're going to play, the accountability has to fall into it right off the bat," Sutter said.

And so for Sutter the fact that Hockey Canada has named its smallest roster ever — just 25 players — to its national junior selection camp is a "huge advantage." It allows him to coach and instill that identity from the get-go, he said, rather than spend time evaluating players.

Minnesota defenceman Mathew Dumba was the lone NHLer named to Hockey Canada's selection camp Monday. BRUCE BENNETT/GETTY IMAGES

"You can run proper practices, you can just get things implemented and get going more with your team," said Sutter, head coach of Canada's world junior team.

"It's a change, it's certainly different than in the past where it's been mid-30s or over, the amount of players that have been invited. But you know what? It's good. It wouldn't have been done this way if there wasn't a real clear direction of path."

Minnesota Wild defence-

man Mathew Dumba was the lone NHL player named Monday to a roster that Sutter called a "moving target." He's holding out hope that more NHL teams will release players before the deadline, such as Calgary Flames centre Sean Monahan, who's out with a fractured left foot. Countries must submit their rosters on Christmas Day, 12 hours before the tournament in Malmö, Sweden, begins.

Two goaltenders — Zachary Fucale and Jake Paterson — plus eight defencemen and 15 forwards have been invited to the selection camp opening Dec. 12 in Toronto.

This national junior team shoulders perhaps more pressure than any team before, since last year marked the first time in 15 years the Canadians didn't bring home a medal. Canada hasn't won world junior gold since 2009.

Koe, Stoughton and McEwan are all winless and say they need to win their next five if they have a hope of making the playoffs.

Stoughton scored three in the ninth end to tie it at 5-5, but Martin left with the win after a single in the 10th.

Pele to play surprise role in World Cup draw

Organizers of the 2014 World Cup say football great Pele will make an appearance at Friday's draw in Brazil but his role is being kept a secret.

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20

As the new moon falls in one of the more adventurous areas of your chart, you will take the kind of risk you might usually steer clear of. No doubt it will surprise a few people when it pays off handsomely.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

In all things there is a natural ebb and flow. If you are on the down side of the curve at the moment, you are sure to be on the up again by week's end.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

Optimism is generally a good thing but too much can be dangerous. The planets warn you must make an effort to see things as they are today, not as how you dream they might be. That applies especially to partnership matters.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

If you change your mind about something today, you will most likely have to change it back again later in the week. Stick with the decision you recently made and see it through to the end. What happened to that resolute Cancer nature?

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

Yours is one of the most favoured signs at the moment and today's new moon in your fellow Fire sign of Sagittarius urges you to cash in on your creative ideas.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

There are times when you let the mask of self-control slip and let your emotions get the better of you and that will most likely happen today. If it does, it may be to your benefit.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

Your energy may be high at the moment but don't burn yourself out. Social invitations will come over the next few days but you are under no obligation to says yes to any.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

The more you are told you can't have something, the more you will make a point of getting it. That could be fun but could also lead to situations that do you no favours. Don't let your desires get out of hand.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

As the new moon takes place in your birth sign, it is essential that you choose one aim and stick with it. This can be one of the most successful times of the year but don't scatter your energies in a dozen directions.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

There is no point trying to hide your feelings because others can see how you are hurting. What they don't understand though is why you are hurting. If you need help, you really must be honest with them.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

The planets warn you need to watch what you say over the next 24 hours. Not everyone appreciates your directness and honesty, especially when it hurts them personally.

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

You may be dreading upheavals on the work front but the planets suggest you have little to worry about. There will be some adjustments to make, but over time you will benefit. SALLY BROMPTON
